Boyden's Edmonton appearance cancelled

metro EXCLUSIVE

City makes move after indigenous elders expressed concerns

Jeremy Simes
Metro | Edmonton

City officials have cancelled Joseph Boyden's scheduled appearance at an upcoming conference after hearing concerns from local indigenous elders about the author.

Boyden, who was scheduled to present at the city-sponsored Winter Cities Shake-Up conference in February, came under fire in December after an investigation by the Aboriginal Peoples Television Network (APTN) questioned his claims of indigenous ancestry.

Coun. Scott McKeen, who sits on a committee overseeing the Winter Cities Shake-Up, said the decision was tough.

"Indigenous relations and reconciliation are some of the highest values for Edmonton," McKeen said. "We did outreach to elders and we heard enough concern that we decided that we would cancel his speaking engagement."

The Winter Cities Shake-Up will showcase Edmonton's winter-city strategies. Boyden, who was to share stories of winter, was scheduled prior to APTN's investigation.

But Boyden will nonetheless be coming to Edmonton.

The author, who has clarified his ancestry since the APTN story, is scheduled to speak at an Edmonton Public Library event on April 27.

Tina Thomas, the library's executive director of strategy and innovation, said officials discussed whether to cancel, but quickly decided Boyden will still speak.

"One of the fundamental values of the public library is intellectual freedom, and the idea that people have the right to express their views," Thomas said.

"We invited Joseph Boyden because he's an internationally renowned author, and that hasn't changed."

McKeen understands people could criticize the committee for potentially censoring Boyden, but said censorship is more relevant to a literature event than a winter conference.

"You sort of recognize the winter story gets lost, and that we don't want, either," he said. "It's not like we're riding on Boyden. The conference is unique in the world and it's really something to be proud of, so why put any stain on that through controversy?"

The National Speakers Bureau — Boyden's representative for the Winter Cities Shake-Up conference — didn't comment by press time after Metro made phone calls.

Child-youth advocate launches LGBTQ report

GOVERNMENT CARE

13 to sit on safety panel

Child and youth advocate Del Graff says he is "quite pleased" with the three experts brought in by the Alberta government to sit on a panel that will study how to keep children in government care safe.

The 13-member panel, finalized Wednesday, includes Patti LaBoucane-Benson with Native Counselling Services of Alberta, Bruce MacLaurin with the faculty of social work at the University of Calgary and Peter Choate, who teaches social work and child mental health at Calgary's Mount Royal University.

"These are people that know the business of child welfare, they know what the issues are," Graff said.

It will be filled out by representatives from all parties in the Alberta legislature.

Debbie Jabbour, the NDP MLA for Peace River, will chair the panel. Human Services Minister Irfan Sabir will sit as an ex-officio member.

Opposition members on the panel include Wildrose human services critic Jason Nixon, Progressive Conservative interim Leader Ric McIver, Alberta Party Leader Greg Clark and Liberal Party Leader David Swann.

Premier Rachel Notley announced the panel in December, in response to slow action in the case of a four-year-old girl named Serenity, who died while in the care of extended family.

Probes stigma, harassment in welfare and justice systems

Kevin Maimann
Metro | Edmonton

Alberta's child and youth advocate is building its first-ever report to protect "LGBTQ2S" youth in the child welfare and youth justice systems, after an outcry from young people about the stigma and harassment they endure.

The office is calling on youth who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer/questioning or two-spirited to share their experiences for the report, which will eventually make a series of recommendations to the government this fall.

"The fact that there needs to be changes is what we've heard over and over again," child and youth advocate Del Graff told Metro Wednesday.

Up to 40 per cent of homeless youth in Alberta are members of the LGBTQ2S community, according to numbers posted on the organization's website.

"If you couldn't be who you are, you wouldn't feel comfortable.

"And we're talking about where young people are living."

The last time the office undertook a special report was in 2014 to address the welfare of indigenous children in government care.

Graff said that while it's unclear at this point what the changes coming out of this report will look like, it is clear that the systems need guidance.

He is also reaching out to social workers and groups that provide services to sexual and gender diverse youth.

Kristopher Wells, faculty director of the University of Alberta's Institute for Sexual Minority Studies and Services, said the voices of queer youth themselves will be the most important piece.

"We know that LGBT youth are often over-represented in issues of homelessness, street involvement, and within the issues of sexuality and gender identity are often poorly understood within the care network," Wells said.

"So it's fantastic to shine a spotlight on these issues and hopefully provide the tools and resources to enable the child and youth care system and workers to do a better job."

LGBTQ2S youth face a 14 times higher risk of suicide and substance abuse compared to cisgender youth, according to a recent Canadian Mental Health Association study.

Small change, big infill

DEVELOPMENT

Council passes motion to alter lot size and ease housing crunch

Jeremy Simes
Metro | Edmonton

In a change that shows the power of the centimetre, city council drew new lines Wednesday that could allow 4,000 lots be split and for skinny homes to be developed on them in Edmonton's mature neighbourhoods.

The amazing part? The change was only 10 centimetres.

Councillors passed a motion at the urban planning committee Wednesday that would allow the minimum lot width for skinny homes be at least 7.5 metres instead of the current 7.6 metres.

The change may seem meaningless but is in fact powerful.

The decision — which will go to a public hearing next month for further debate — comes after

Sherri Shorten, an architect in Edmonton, proposed the city look at the 'pork-chop' model to make infill development work for everyone. JEREMY SIMES/METRO the city discovered lots were 14.9 metres (rather than the typical 15.2 metres) due to archaic surveying methods.

Infill woes

The motion came after councillors debated the next steps of Edmonton's infill plans, as administration will begin focussing on mid-rise projects along main road corridors near transit hubs.

But Coun. Ben Henderson wasn't pleased with how the city was allowing some new developments to bend the rules. That includes apartments being built on small lots and allowing homes to have side entrances.

"Having some of these large variances in there doesn't help build that trust with the community," Henderson said.

Want a pork-chop?

Infill affordability was also raised during the debate, as new skinny homes are largely made for people with fat wallets.

Sherri Shorten, an architect in Edmonton, presented committee with an affordability solution in the form of "pork-chop" lots.

Such lots are divided horizontally, where small and affordable homes would face the back alley while a taller home would face the street.

Kalen Anderson, director of planning with the city, said the pork-chop model is worth thinking about.

"With this nodes and corridors approach, we can talk about different types of housing, which also has different price points for a more inclusive community."

POLITICS

Campaign strategist asks to be reinstated

A campaign organizer banished from the Alberta PC party for a year for offensive posts on social media said Wednesday he was filing paperwork asking to be reinstated.

Alan Hallman said he was denied due process to tell his side of the story.

"I've never once been asked to defend myself on this. I wasn't even aware this was going on," Hallman said in an interview.

"Where is the due process through this? They are smearing my reputation through the media with no opportunity for me to defend myself."

Troy Wason, the party's executive director, declined to say what will happen when Hallman's paperwork is delivered or whether Hallman will get a hearing. Party president Katherine O'Neill could not be reached for comment.

Hallman has apologized for the messages but says he is not even aware who, if anyone, filed a complaint against him.

Nothing fishy about where these're caught

BUSINESS

Know-your-food trend's on the line and many sellers are reeling it in

Lucy Haines
For Metro | Edmonton

Knowing where your food comes from is a consumer trend that's paying dividends for Edmonton seafood retailer Ocean Odyssey Inland.

"We're breaking sales records by leaps and bounds since our relaunch. Not all businesses are suffering in today's economy," said co-owner Pat Batten, who with husband Darrell expanded the shop several months ago to a west-end site.

Part of that growth is latching on to the know-your-food trend, they said.

"We can tell you the boat the fish comes from — even the fisherman's name. We follow the fish from the source: how it's handled and shipped. It's a specialty product, but a lot of customers want quality food, and they'll invest in buying and cooking it at home," Batten said.

The know-your-food trend is becoming mainstream, said Sylvain Charlebois from the University of Guelph's Food Institute. "Consumers are increasingly concerned about where their food comes from, so environmental impact, animal welfare, natural versus artificial, and supply-chain transparency influence their buying decisions, making values often matter more than value," he said.

Chef Daniel Letourneau
KEVIN TUONG/FOR METRO

From B.C. Coho and red spring salmon to weekly shipments of Icelandic cod, redfish, haddock and the number-one seller, Arctic Char (put out fresh every Thursday thanks to Icelandair's weekly Edmonton stop), Odyssey chef and general manager Daniel Letourneau said buyers on a budget are downsizing portions.

A longtime vendor with the farmers' market, Ocean Odyssey offers products from fellow vendors like Fuge Fine Meats, Meat Street Pies food truck, Luba's Tortes and Sunshine Organics.

"Going out to eat may take a dip these days, but people still have to eat," said Letourneau. "They're coming here."

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Officer leads police while facing charges

The Calgary Police Association continues to be led by an officer who has been charged with perjury and assault with a weapon, a vice-president with the 2,200-member union said Wednesday.

Mike Lomore, the association's vice-president of administration, said Sgt. Les Kaminski remains president, but the organization's board is weighing options and consulting members.

The Alberta Serious Incident Response Team, the province's police watchdog, announced charges Tuesday against Kaminski and another officer, Const. Brant Derrick, who is accused of assault causing bodily harm.

"We support both officers facing these charges," Lomore said. "They're only allegations right now."

The charges stem from a 2008 traffic stop in downtown Calgary that resulted in the arrest of Jason Arkinstall, who was charged with uttering threats against Derrick.

Arkinstall was acquitted in 2011.

Lomore said he can't understand why so much time passed between the arrest and charges being laid against the officers.

"This is ridiculous and it shouldn't happen. These officers have suffered a great deal of stress. Their names are being besmudged in the press as to what they're involved in," he said.

Lomore said he's known Kaminski for a long time and "he's a good man."

Supt. Steve Barlow with the Calgary Police Service said Tuesday a review was conducted after the 2011 trial, but it was determined that a wider investigation was not necessary. He said that in hindsight the police should have investigated.

Why Canada is sending immigrants back home

LAW

Permanent residency revoked over non-compliance

An average of about 1,400 Canadian immigrants are intercepted at the border each year and ordered removed from the country for not fulfilling their residency obligations, Torstar has learned.

Although these newcomers can appeal to a tribunal to restore their permanent resident status, only one in 10 succeeds, according to government data.

"The tribunal is supposed to be immigrants' last resort as the Parliament has given it the discretionary power to give immigrants a second chance if they breach the law," said immigration lawyer Lawrence Wong, who obtained the data through an access to information request.

"But that second chance in reality is hard to come by. The national sentiment is pretty much the same. If you are an immigrant, don't make a mistake. If you do, we want to see you kicked out."

Canada's immigration law requires permanent residents to be physically present in Canada for at least 730 days in every five-year period in order to maintain their status. Otherwise, their residency will be revoked.

According to the Canada Border Services Agency, on average 1,423 permanent residents a year were stopped at the border for failing the requirement from 2010 to 2014, the most recent statistics available. During the period, Canada accepted some 260,000 newcomers annually.

The number of removal orders issued against these individuals had risen sharply to 1,413 in 2014 from 605 in 2008, when former Conservative Immigration Minister Jason Kenney cracked down on fraud.

Across Canada, Quebec had the highest detection rate; more than a third of the removal orders were issued in the province.

Between 2008 and 2014, a total of 3,575 immigrants were slapped with removal orders for residency non-compliance at Pierre Elliot Trudeau airport in Montreal, dwarfing the 439 and 972 people respectively intercepted at Toronto's Pearson airport and the Vancouver International Airport.

The numbers do not include those who had their permanent residency revoked due to criminality and misrepresentation, who were refused travel documents to return or who voluntarily relinquished their permanent residence. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

QUEBEC

Anglophones angered by Trudeau town hall

Quebec's deep-rooted linguistic tensions flared up in unlikely fashion Wednesday as Prime Minister Justin Trudeau was forced to explain why he refused to answer questions in English at a town hall meeting.

The controversy erupted when Trudeau answered English questions in French on Tuesday night — including one about how English speakers could get help to access to mental health services.

"Thank you for using our country's two official languages, but since we're in Quebec I'll respond in French," Trudeau told a woman at a town hall meeting in Sherbrooke.

His unilingual performance drew an angry response from groups that represent Quebec anglophones, with some calling on the prime minister to apologize for showing what they called disrespect toward the English speakers in the audience.

Asked whether the English-speaking people in the audience Tuesday night did not deserve to understand him, he replied: "I maybe could have answered partly in English and partly in French and, on reflection, it would have been a good thing to do." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Inaugural needs to unify

GOVERNMENT

Experts say speech should be 'inherently inspirational'

Tradition suggests it's time for Donald Trump to set aside the say-anything speaking style and rise to the inaugural moment.

But bucking tradition, or ignoring it altogether, is what got Donald Trump to his inaugural moment.

When Trump stands on the west front of the Capitol on Friday and delivers his inaugural address, all sides will be waiting to see whether he comes bearing a unifying message for a divided nation or decides to play up his persona as a disrupter of the established order.

How Trump tends to that balancing act, in both style and content, will be a telling launch for his presidency.

"The inaugural is an address that is meant for the ages," said Kathleen Hall Jamieson, a communications professor and director of the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania. "In particular, it's important when you've had a divisive election. You need to become president of all of the people."

Trump seems to get that. He's spoken admiringly in recent weeks about the speeches of past presidents Ronald Reagan and John F. Kennedy, and is said to be deeply involved in preparing his address.

Trump told Fox on Tuesday that he'll start his address with words of thanks to "everybody," including President Barack Obama and his wife, Michelle, for being "so gracious."

The president-elect showed he can deliver a straight-forward, prepared address at the Republican convention, where he largely stuck to a script and shut down anti-Hillary Clinton chants of "lock her up."

But that address was strikingly dark in tone, sketching a portrait of an America in crisis, and he later embraced that chant from supporters at his free-wheeling campaign rallies.

The inaugural address, by contrast, needs to be "an inherently aspirational speech," said Michael Gerson, who wrote speeches for President George W. Bush and is a frequent Trump critic. "It has to be about the future and about your vision."

Veteran speechwriters have plenty of other advice for Trump and his chief wordsmith, Stephen Miller.

Keep it short. Don't overdo the gravitas. Don't gloat, the victory tour is over. No deviations from script. Oh, and don't undo a successful inaugural address with an intemperate tweet a few hours later.

GLOBAL WARMING

Earth keeps on sizzling

Earth heated up to a third-straight record hot year in 2016, with scientists mostly blaming man-made global warming with help from a natural El Nino that's now gone.

Two U.S. agencies and international weather groups reported Wednesday that last year was the warmest on record. They measure global temperatures in slightly different ways, and came up with a range of increases, from minuscule to what top American climate scientists described as substantial.

They're "all singing the same song even if they are hitting different notes along the way. The pattern is very clear," said Deke Arndt of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

NOAA calculated that the average global temperature for 2016 was 58.69 degrees (14.84 C) — beating the previous year by 0.07 degrees (0.04 C).

NASA's figures, which include more of the Arctic, are higher. The Arctic "was enormously warm, like totally off the charts," said Gavin Schmidt.

LUKE SAVAGE ON CHANNELLING DESPAIR

When dark clouds gather on the political horizon, I believe the most radically constructive thing anyone can do is to take democracy seriously.

If there was a dominant emotion among my friends, family, acquaintances, and coworkers on the morning of November 9th, 2016, it was most definitely despair.

The surprising victory of Donald Trump — which defied the predictions of all the supposed experts, pollsters, and political professionals — felt like a sudden kick to the solar plexus right before a desperately needed gasp of air. It wasn't our country, of course, but even the most disinterested among us immediately knew politics was soon going to feel a lot more present in our daily lives whether we liked it or not.

Cynicism about politics is as common as white bread. But cynicism is by its very nature a passive thing. Despair can be visceral and even painful. That the sheer ugliness of a figure like Donald Trump could prevail in an election to lead the world's most powerful country has evinced something more potent than cynicism, even among people usually uninterested by politics. The same questions have seemed to be on everyone's minds ever since: How do we respond? What can we do? What can I do?

When dark clouds gather on the political horizon, I believe the most radically constructive thing anyone can do is to take democracy seriously.

If this sounds like a simple cliché or truism, consider how much we've seen democracy decline — here in Canada, in America and around the world — over the past few decades.

More and more, our politicians have preferred to speak like managers rather than leaders, demoting themselves to ever more passive roles, and preferring to tinker and administer rather than take up the hard work of building a better society. They've campaigns have increasingly become expensive set-pieces that offer people an ever narrower range of choices, albeit wrapped in shinier and shinier packaging.

As this process has unfolded whole communities have been transformed, as if by some invisible hand. In to control or shape our own lives. The democratic idea that politics has any collective moral purpose, let alone the notion it can be used by regular people to influence the courses of their own lives, has been steadily and catastrophically eroded.

All this breeds a cynicism that can easily fester into despair. In at least one sense, then, Trump's election didn't produce the despair that followed in its wake so much as force it out into the open.

But amidst such despair, there can be signs of hope.

My own sense of resignation and dread in the days and weeks following Trump's victory slowly gave way to a cautious feeling of optimism. And it wasn't the comforting (and in retrospect, naive) optimism my younger self had felt exactly eight years earlier after the last transformative U.S. election. Instead, it was the feeling that people's collective shock and outrage, coupled with a sense that many things badly need to change, might actually reinvigorate democracy.

It's easy to forget that politics don't begin and end when we vote in an election every few years. They're around us every day in our cities, workplaces, neighbourhoods, communities and social movements — conducted not by political professionals but by regular people, often strangers, forming ad hoc coalitions and campaigning for progress and change, large and small.

This process, more than anything else, is what feeds democracy and compels political elites, willingly or otherwise, to take it seriously.

It's the only thing that ever has.

City cores are fast becoming too expensive for their own workforces to actually live in and badly paid retail and service work is increasingly taking the place of the factories and workshops that once were.

In the midst of the jarring political, social and cultural changes of recent decades — virtually all of them accompanied by encouraging slogans about economic growth and new technology — very few among us have developed a greater sense of being able

VICKY MOCHAMA

How to keep the fires burning?

The most notable thing about John Lewis isn't that he used to work with Martin Luther King or that he has recently become the president-elect's favourite new punching bag.

It's that he's still protesting.

In June last year, Lewis led Democrats in a 25-hour sit-in on the floor of the House of Representatives over a gun-control bill. Fifty-two years after Lewis and hundreds of others were violently attacked by police while crossing the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma, he is still getting into what he calls "good trouble."

Sustaining that kind of activist passion for half a century isn't easy. If the work of campaigning for change wasn't hard enough, activists then struggle with compassion fatigue, poverty and mental health.

At a certain point, the work becomes all-consuming — and not in the best ways. In the book "What's the Point of Revolution if We Can't Dance?" dozens of activists speak candidly about their challenges.

Says one: "Who tells us when it's too much? Where to go after, and beyond activism...when our identity is so tied up with being an activist? And where is the space to go? To go home?"

Burnout can push people away. Friends of mine who started their careers in the charitable and activist sectors ended up quitting. Not because they didn't love the work or want to change the world; they simply could no longer bear it.

Of course there are structural fixes to be made. Workplaces can modify their structures and policies. Donors and governments can develop more predictable funding cycles (money, and the lack of it, is an ever-present stress).

Many of the movements that have caught our attention in the last few years were not driven by professional activists. The women of Idle No More, the black queer youth of Black Lives Matter, the citizens of the Standing Rock Sioux — they had taken time from their paying jobs and put in energy outside of work hours.

But after the public spotlight, it is these campaigners who will be left with the social, financial and emotional scars of their moment. Maintaining any gains and preventing losses will require self-care.

For those who demand radical change, self-care is a radical act. It is recognizing that political wins can have personal losses.

It takes an incredible amount of courage to speak up and speak out. It takes even more to know when to step back from the microphone.

This is the kind of self-love and resiliency that has kept John Lewis on the frontlines of protest.

ACTIVIST WISDOM It's fundamental!

"Some of the most profound understandings about our world emerge from ordinary people coming together and organizing for change. Collective forms of activism and organizing can be incubators for ideas and alternative visions that question the status quo, lead us to better understand the root causes of problems and also help us to think through, the possibilities and ways to make change."

A cartoonish life that was too real

INTERVIEW

The bestseller who dabbled in bondage and cannibalism

Sue Carter
For Metro Canada

Cartoonist Joe Ollmann first discovered William Seabrook's biography in a zombie anthology 11 years ago, and was instantly taken. Seabrook — the American who is credited with introducing the word "zombie" into contemporary culture with his 1929 bestselling book The Magic Island — was a he-man adventurer who travelled with the Bedouin.

He also hung out with various intellectuals and artists of the era, including Gertrude Stein, Man Ray and Aldous Huxley.

But the more Ollmann dug into the details of Seabrook's life, the more salacious the details got. He discovered an unrepentant alcoholic with an equally unrepentant and sadistic penchant for bondage.

Oh, and he once tried cannibalism.

"It's not the aberrations that interest me so much as it is his honesty in writing about them," says Ollmann, who is from Hamilton, Ont. "In a very repressed time during the '30s and '40s, this guy's writing openly about bondage and cannibalism for major publishers and places like Ladies Home Journal. People hide their weirdness and he never did."

For five years, Ollmann read everything about and by Seabrook he could get his hands on, including his first book, Adventures in Arabia, about his time living in the Middle East, and Asylum, which chronicles Seabrook's voluntary stay in a mental hospital for alcoholism.

"He had this crazy fascinating life but no one knows about him," says Ollmann, who then spent another five years dedicated to researching the writer's life for his new graphic novel, The Abominable Mr. Seabrook.

While gathering background information, Ollmann travelled to the University of Oregon, which houses the archives of Seabrook's second wife, novelist Marjorie Worthington.

In her writings and letters, Ollmann discovered a harsher side of the man, which doesn't appear in his own books.

"He tells his stories very blithely, and puts it in these very humorous terms," Ollmann says.

"Her perspective is much darker. I didn't want to portray him as all bad, but there is a lot of bad to be said. It is hard to live with a person who is an alcoholic. He never showed it but other people did, so it was only fair for me to show it, too."

One of the inadvertent effects of working on The Abominable Mr. Seabrook was that Ollmann himself quit drinking.

While labouring away in his home studio at night, Ollmann would keep a bottle of whisky or cognac on hand for sipping, and although he stopped mostly for health purposes and not directly because of Seabrook: "I was constantly writing and drawing him drinking. There are so many pictures of him drinking because it was so much part of his story," he says. "I got sick of drawing and showing someone ruining their life with booze."

Seabrook died in 1945 from taking an overdose of sleeping pills — by which point his work was basically forgotten.

Ollmann speculates that Seabrook's downfall was in part due to his alcoholism, but also because, later in life, he gave up his adventuring ways, settling down in the Hudson Valley to present teatime talks to social groups.

His is a cautionary tale indeed, but Ollmann — who recently illustrated the covers and wrote introductions for reissues of Seabrook's The Magic Island and Asylum — really wants people to discover the man's writing.

"His first books are wonderful, adventure-travel books," Ollmann says. "He wrote about trashy subjects but he wrote about them smarter than you would have expected."

Music's patron saint of activism

INTERVIEW

Why icon Buffy Sainte-Marie is still making a social impact

ACTIVISM!

Buffy Sainte-Marie has told the stories of outliers and underdogs throughout her career and organizers at the Juno Awards say it's time to recognize the singer's contributions to the community.

The four-time Juno winner and social activist will be this year's recipient of the Allan Waters Humanitarian Award, an honour reserved for Canadian musicians who've left a positive social impact.

The Canadian Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences says Sainte-Marie "exemplifies the essence of humanitarianism" with her dedication to protecting indigenous communities.

She's also provoked conversation through songs like her 1964 anti-war peace anthem Universal Soldier.

Sainte-Marie also founded the Nihewan Foundation for Native American Education in 1969, a non-profit initiative to improve education and awareness of the cultures.

"A long time ago I figured out I have enough money to probably have three meals a day for the rest of my life," Sainte-Marie says. "So I wanted to put my money to work early."

Speaking from her Hawaiian home, Sainte-Marie talked about nonprofits and protest songs.

You've been a tireless voice for causes throughout your career, but fewer people know about why you created the Nihewan education foundation. How did it happen?

Before I was ever a singer I was a teacher. I got my teaching degree (and) a degree in Oriental philosophy. Because I had a personal interest — and the advantage of a scholarship about indigenous issues — that probably had something to do with it. (The feeling) has stayed with me always through my career, going in and out of the aboriginal community ... building a bridge between cultures.

You've been a voice for the indigenous community but it's never fully defined your career. Did you pursue a balance that also factors in your pop and folk influences?

I've had over 50 years of that kind of double perception, which is very nice for me. I think my real work has been in the realm of thought. I really feel as though ... I've changed the way some people think about war, alternative conflict resolution and indigenous issues. I did it early and I've done it consistently because I really do care.

With Donald Trump headed to the White House do you expect more protest songs to emerge from discontent gestating in some communities?

I wish. There were a lot of people in the Civil Rights movement who just showed up because it was the popular thing to do. It became "hip" to seem like you were part of that. There are a lot of people, for instance, who go to Standing Rock and confuse it with Burning Man. My question to all the other great songwriters in the world is: Where are your protest songs? Now that Donald Trump is (elected) are you going to start writing them now? I mean, where was your protest song last year? And the year before? Some people are consistently aware of the world and trying to share their best contributions. Other people just show up when somebody's handing out free gifts at the party.

Are you writing any new material?

I'm working on an album that should be out sometime this year called Medicine Songs. (It's) grouping real positive songs like, Carry it

There are a lot of people who go to Standing Rock and confuse it with Burning Man. Buffy Sainte-Marie on modern social justice campaigns

Buffy Sainte-Marie will be the first indigenous woman to win the Allan Waters Humanitarian Award at the Junos in April. HANDOUT

On, We Are Circling, Star-walker, together with my best-known protest songs about contemporary issues.

What inspires you to stay motivated to keep writing?
Kind of depends on where I am. When I'm in Hawaii it's just nature. I live with a lot of animals and plants and nature is "vitamin green" for me. I also have a double life. I'm home for two weeks, I'm on the road for two weeks. What motivates me are the same things that motivated me in the beginning. I respond to the world, I fall in love like everybody else. I see things that need change and I think the world is always ripening.

MEET THE CONDO

E'SCAPES CONDOMINIUMS

A home to escape to

CONTRIBUTED

Project overview

It's no surprise that E'scapes condos are nearly sold out. The southwest Carrington development has the location and features today's buyers appreciate: modern architecture, rooftop terraces and a fitness centre, underground parking and more. And with promotions of up to $75,000 off certain suites, the deal here couldn't be sweeter.

Housing amenities

E'scapes suites are open concept spaces, with luxurious finishes like high ceilings, tile, hardwood and granite. There's energy efficient windows and oversized patios, underground parking, appliance packages with in-suite front loading washer/dryer and designer lighting. Kitchens feature granite countertops and eating bars, and a design consultation will tie it all together for buyers.

In the neighbourhood

E'scapes is next to the Ellerslie Rugby Club and is close to shopping, restaurants, established area amenities and is minutes away from the Anthony Henday. Banks, services, greenspaces and walking paths are plentiful here too, and it's a quick trip for those who need the international airport or access to Highway 2 and points south.

Location and transit

E'scapes is in the vibrant and amenity-rich community of Richford in the city's southwest. Intense growth in this quadrant of the city makes for plentiful transit and planned LRT expansion, so transit users will find quick links along 111 St. and Ellerslie Rd. The same goes for vehicle commuters, who can access the Anthony Henday, Ellerslie Rd. or Gateway Blvd. LUCY HAINES/FOR METRO

GARDENING

You're going on vacation, but what about your plants?

Winter, especially early winter, is a good time of year for gardeners to travel. Houseplants now are most tolerant of neglect and, if we plan a little, they can even thrive in our absence.

Lack of water is the major threat to neglected plants. But you know how long your plants can go between waterings. So if your trip to Florida is for eight days and you've been watering your schefflera every five days, just give the plant a thorough soaking and then add a little extra water to its saucer. The plant will be fine.

If you're skipping off for a one-month tour through Brazil, you better do something more with your houseplants before you leave.

The key to plant survival, in this case, is either to supply water to the plants, to decrease their water needs, or a little of both.

Keeping your plants supplied with water

This can test your ability to cajole friends, relatives or neighbours. But beware of entrusting plant care to those unfamiliar with your plants' peculiarities; my cyclamen needs water every few days, while some of my succulents go all winter without a drop of water.

I use inexpensive automatic watering devices if my absence is to be longer than two weeks. A cotton rope, with one end buried in the soil and the other end dipped in a pan of water, will wick water to drying soil.

Another device, slightly more expensive but also more reliable, consists of a hollow, porous ceramic cone with one end of a long, flexible tube sealed into its lid. The cone and the tube are filled with water. They're sold as "plant watering stakes" or "plant watering cones."

Decrease water needs

Plants have little holes in their leaves, called stomata, which let gases in for photosynthesis and let water out (transpiration). Moving a plant from a bright window to a dimly lit corner decreases photosynthesis, so stomata stay closed more often, and transpiration decreases.

None of this advice applies to succulents, which include cacti and other fleshy plants such as jade plants and sedums. These plants thrive on dry conditions.

for energy (which comes from photosynthesis) and leaves turn sickly and yellow.

Transpiration is how to keep plants cool. Lowering the air temperature will decrease plant transpiration and, hence, water use. This fits well with a traveller's needs: No need to keep your house warm while you're away on vacation.

Yet another way to slow transpiration is to raise the humidity around your plants. I cluster plants together and fill their saucers with a shallow depth of water. For a longer vacation, I drape clear plastic, such as a cut-open dry-cleaning bag, over the plants. Sticks poked into the soil keep the plastic off plants' leaves. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Home sweet home office

Maybe your new home has a den, a spare bedroom or even a great little corner space where you can carve out a home office.

Whether you work from home or use the space to pay bills and surf the web, you'll want a pulled-together place that is both practical and aesthetically pleasing.

An efficient work area includes functional storage, good lighting, vertical shelving to maximize space, and clever, clutter-busting touches. Here are three things to make your home office awesome.

HOW TO FIND BEAUTIFUL, AFFORDABLE NEW FLOORING

If you're planning a renovation or building a new home and you're looking for new floors, there's one business that should be the first stop on your list: Touchtone Canada.

The flooring company offers the best prices in the city — equivalent to wholesale — and their knowledgeable, friendly staff are always there to help you make informed decisions based on your budget, tastes and practical needs.

The selection of flooring available to you at Touchtone is enormous. The 50,000-square-foot showroom carries thousands of flooring types including hardwood, luxury vinyl plank (LVP), laminate, tile and carpet.

LVP is one very popular option for homes, offering excellent durability with an attractive surface. At Touchtone it starts at $1.29 per square foot — a fraction of the price of hardwood.

For any flooring, Touchtone will beat quotes from competitors by at least five per cent.

"Customer satisfaction is a major piece of the puzzle for us," says Baneet Singh, general manager and partner at Touchtone Canada.

For Touchtone, that includes professional flooring installation. The team of expert flooring installers has years of experience handling every type of flooring. They'll make sure yours looks its best in your home.

"When a customer buys flooring from us, we want to make sure they're 100 per cent satisfied with the results, not just on the day the flooring is put down, but for the entire lifetime of their floors," says Singh.

Live well in the heart of the city

Living downtown has its perks — particularly if you're at 109th Street and Jasper Avenue, one of Edmonton's most vibrant intersections.

At that address, residents at the new rental community The Mayfair on Jasper have their pick of shopping, restaurants, entertainment and nightlife.

The development has just finalized three new retail tenants. Soon residents will be able to grab a healthy wrap on the go at Freshii, savour a fresh Hawaiian poké at Splash Poké or indulge in a trendy Taiwanese dessert at ZenQ.

"Our residents have easy access to everything they need from the shops, eateries and services nearby — with several appealing choices within their own building," says Matt Salucop, director of marketing for ProCura Real Estate Services, the developers behind

The development's eco-friendly features will make you equally proud to call The Mayfair on Jasper home. All homes have energy-efficient, triple-pane windows. The building also generates some of its own energy using solar panels and a co-generation energy system, which repurposes heat created by the generation of electricity to help warm the building.

Residents can reduce their environmental footprint even more by using the building's exclusive car-sharing program, or by taking public transit from the Corona LRT Station, located onsite.

START THE NEW YEAR IN YOUR NEW HOME

Is a new home on your list of goals for 2017?

Brookfield Residential offers beautifully designed single family and multi-family homes in five desirable communities. Depending on your timeline, you can put roots down in your gorgeous new home by choosing from a variety of homes ready in one, two or three months.

"All five of our active communities currently have quick-possession homes available," says Wendy Jabusch, senior vice president of homes for Brookfield Residential Edmonton. The communities include Lake Summerside and The Orchards in the southeast, Chappelle Gardens and Paisley in the southwest, and Edgemont in the west. "There are quick-possession options to suit everyone, from growing families to individual homeowners just entering the market," says Jabusch.

The variety of compelling floor plans include single-family homes, duplexes and townhouses starting from the mid $200s.

All well-appointed and thoughtfully designed, the homes offer all the smart solutions and careful craftsmanship you have come to expect from Brookfield Residential, but they also let you move in quickly — in 30, 60 or 90 days, depending what suits you best.

While all Brookfield communities are designed with public gathering places and green spaces for families and neighbours to get outside and connect, when you choose a quick-possession home in Chappelle Gardens, The Orchards or Lake Summerside, you also gain entry to the communities' Residents' Associations with a variety of facilities like NHL-sized hockey rinks, basketball courts, tennis courts, spray parks, playgrounds, and programming.

While the Lake Summerside Beach Club is already in full swing, the Residents' Association buildings in Chappelle Gardens and The Orchards will both open in 2017. In addition to the multitude of recreational facilities, Brookfield Residential's Residents' Associations also host programs and events throughout the year, and amenities are made available for residents' own bookings as well.

A quick-possession home doesn't mean you have to give up on upgrades either. The Alma duplex in Chappelle Gardens, for example, has luxurious interior finishes, two master bedroom suites with ensuites and walk-in closets, as well as a flex room on the second floor and upstairs laundry.

Located at 2786 Coughlan Green SW, this home is only $338,800 (including GST) and available in only 30 days.

For more information on Brookfield Residential's quick-possession homes, visit LiveBrookfield.com.

Now is the time for home ownership

Starting at only $427 bi-weekly, Brookfield Residential Edmonton is making it easier than ever to stop renting and start owning.

Renters can now purchase a home for mortgage payments comparable to the rent they're paying.

Brookfield Residential's modern townhouses — with their amazing floor plans — provide many of the features people look for when purchasing a single-family home. Options include walk-in closets, upstairs laundry, Master ensuites, and double-attached garages.

While all three townhouse projects include thoughtful design and functional spaces to make your own, as well as parks and green areas to get out and connect with neighbours and family; these townhouses also offer low-maintenance perks like hassle-free yards. It's about the lifestyle you want.

Canvas Townhomes in Paisley feature oversized windows, sleek exteriors, and modern interior finishes. Choices like vaulted ceilings and large balconies off the bedroom are available in some units. The 1,203 sq. ft. Michelangelo provides so many options, like three main floor kitchen plans to choose from and either upstairs dual-Master bedrooms with ensuites and walk-in closets, or a three-bedroom floor plan, starting in mid to high $200s.

Vista Pointe in Chappelle Gardens has open-concept plans and flex spaces to ensure everyone in the home has room to gather and room to retreat. You have a choice of three bedrooms or dual master bedrooms in the 1,349 sq. ft. Edison, and you can customize it with features like a fire place or balcony off the kitchen. For people who like extra space, there is a double garage and extra flex space in the basement.

Are you interested in upgrades like granite counter tops, fire places, or hardwood flooring? Until March 31, Brookfield Residential is offering new homebuyers 50 per cent off interior upgrades.

To explore these and other available townhouses that can move you from renting to owning, visit LiveBrookfield.com.

Creativity and innovation

Paisley in Heritage Valley is a unique and diverse community unlike any other in Edmonton. Walkability is a key aspect in Paisley, so the streets are set away from fast-moving traffic and local bus routes don't intersect the community. Public art is prominent in Paisley, and some unique reverse housing lots mean home fronts are connected to green space, so it's easier to get outside and into the community.

Duplexes, single-family homes, and townhomes, in an eclectic mix of modern and traditional designs and styles, all coexist amidst parks and green spaces.

Convenience and connectedness are also important in Paisley, so a host of amenities are easily accessible, including shopping, schools, medical clinics, and recreational facilities. For a limited time, Brookfield Residential is offering new homebuyers in Paisley 50 per cent off interior upgrades. Come and explore Paisley today. Visit LiveBrookfield.com for more information.

Building a legacy

NFL PLAYOFFS

Falcons QB Ryan has the statistics but not the rings

Matt Ryan knew the question was coming.

There are four quarterbacks still standing in the NFL playoffs. Only one has failed to win a Super Bowl title.

Any guesses who that might be?

"Yeah," Ryan said dryly, pointing toward the questioner with a big smile, breaking the room up.

With his greatest season, Ryan has guided the Atlanta Falcons within two wins of their first Super Bowl title. It's a tantalizing chance to fill the most glaring hole on his resumé, to take care of the one thing that separates him from New England's Tom Brady, Pittsburgh's Ben Roethlisberger and Green Bay's Aaron Rodgers.

Ryan might be the favourite to capture the MVP award, too. But chances are he won't be considered a truly elite quarterback, the kind they start clearing a spot for in Canton, until he brings home a championship.

"He craves a Super Bowl," said former Falcons teammate Tony Gonzalez, now an analyst for CBS. "Absolutely it would change the national perception of him. It would change the perception he has of himself. ... It would change everything for him."

Ryan has certainly had a stellar career up to now, and even his performance a year ago — generally viewed as the worst of his career — really wasn't all that poor statistically. But it certainly wasn't up to his standards, largely because the Falcons finishing 8-8 after winning their first five games.

Like any top player, Ryan is fastidious about his preparation. But something really clicked this year in the way he gets ready for a game. Nothing seems to faze him. No situation appears to catch him off-guard.

A more comfortable relationship in his second year with offensive co-ordinator Kyle Shanahan is usually offered up as the most logical reason for Ryan's transformation. But it runs deeper than that.

"I feel well-prepared week in and week out. I feel ready and confident when we get to games," Ryan said Wednesday. "Do I feel like I've gotten to a place where I'm doing it better than I've done it up to this point? Absolutely."

No argument there. Ryan completed just under 70 per cent of his throws during the regular season, and finished with a career-best 38 touchdowns and 4,944 yards — and a career-low seven interceptions — while leading the Falcons (12-5) to the NFC South title.

Ryan shrugs off any speculation about what a victory Sunday might mean to his legacy, but others know how important this is.

"We've come to a day and age where it's how many Super Bowls were you in? How many victories did you have? How did you play in the so-called big games?" said Phil Simms, who was with the New York Giants for a pair of Super Bowl titles. "It's really big for him — and it's a word I hate to use — but his legacy. That's just the way it is."

Brown apologizes for livestreaming video

Antonio Brown's Facebook Live video had 900,000 views before being removed. KEITH SRAKOCIC/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Antonio Brown insists he didn't mean to disrespect his coach or create a distraction when the All-Pro wide receiver livestreamed the raucous aftermath of the Pittsburgh Steelers' playoff win over the Kansas City Chiefs last week.

The ever social media savvy Brown also didn't rule out doing it again.

Even as Brown apologized for his decision to let his over 650,000 Facebook fans in on a usually private moment — one that caught head coach Mike Tomlin using a profanity to describe the New England Patriots — he played coy Wednesday when asked if he's going to leave his camera off the next time the post-game locker-room door is closed.

"I guess you've got to wait and see," Brown said.

"I wanted to give the fans an intimate experience."

AUSTRALIAN OPEN

Bouchard makes return to 3rd round

Canadian Eugenie Bouchard is back in the third round of the Australian Open for the first time in two years after defeating China's Peng Shuai 7-6 (5), 6-2 on Wednesday.

Bouchard, who reached the semifinals of the Australian Open in 2014, finally closed it out after Peng saved three match points on the Canadian's serve at 5-1 in the second set.

Following her break-out year in 2014, which also saw her reach the Wimbledon final, Bouchard struggled to make it past the fourth round at the slams. Her best result last year was the third round at Wimbledon.

Her next opponent will be American Coco Vandeweghe, who defeated Pauline Parmentier of France in straight sets.

"Overall, I'm feeling better with each passing day," said Bouchard.

Also, Ottawa's Gabriela Dabrowski and Michaela Krajicek of the Netherlands won their first-round doubles match, defeating Georgia's Oksana Kalashnikova and Serbia's Aleksandra Krunic 6-2, 6-0.

The percentage of votes players must receive to get into the hall.

Former Montreal star Tim Lincecum along with Jeff Bagwell, and Ivan Rodriguez have been elected to baseball's Hall of Fame, earning the honour as Trevor Hoffman and another Expos great, Vladimir Guerrero, fell just short.

Steroids-tainted stars Barry Bonds and Roger Clemens were passed over for the fifth straight year by the Baseball Writers' Association of America but received significantly more votes

Bagwell drew 86.2 per cent of votes, Lincecum got 86 per cent and Rodriguez had 76 per cent.

Bautista officially back with the Blue Jays

Toronto Blue Jays outfielder Jose Bautista decided to test the free agent market this off-season. A return to the city where he blossomed into one of the game's top sluggers turned out to be the best fit.

The Blue Jays confirmed Wednesday that Bautista has re-signed with the team, agreeing to a one-year deal with a guaranteed base salary of $18 million US. The contract includes options that could see him stay in Toronto through 2019. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wheat Kings' Patrick tops North American rankings

Brandon Wheat Kings forward Nolan Patrick was named the top North American draft-eligible skater for the 2017 Draft by the NHL Central Scouting Bureau on Wednesday.

He has 13 points (six goals, seven assists) in eight games this season. Patrick has missed most of the campaign due to an upper-body injury.

Reynolds' return was a hard road

ICE SKATING

Skater thought career was over, is very grateful to be back

Kevin Reynolds' rehabilitation from hip surgery took place in a gym adjacent to a skating rink in Burnaby, B.C.

The 26-year-old would watch the skaters at his training base at Eight Rinks, all the while not knowing if he'd ever skate again.

But the three-time national silver medallist announced his return to the international ice with a bronze medal at Skate Canada International in the fall — his first-ever Grand Prix medal — and is looking forward to competing at this week's national championships in Ottawa.

"After a few months off the ice I started to really miss it, and knew I wanted to at least give it a shot and at least try to come back. And if there was pain, I would give it up at that point and move on," Reynolds said. "But the signs were all positive. Step by step, I was able to work things through and manage it."

Reynolds' career has been an unenviable roller-coaster of injuries and ill-fitting skates. He famously had to withdraw from several major competitions while he searched the globe for skates that would fit his extremely narrow feet.

It was the hip injury though that threatened to derail his career for good.

The injury forced the Coquitlam, B.C., skater to withdraw from the free program at the 2015 Canadian championships, and he underwent the surgery three months later.

"There was no continuing without (the surgery)," Reynolds said. "Even with risk of not being able to skate again, there was really no choice."

Kevin Reynolds is looking for more national championship silverware this weekend at TD Place. TOM SZCZERBOWSKI/GETTY IMAGES

He rebounded to win bronze at last year's Canadian championships. Then, competing in his first Grand Prix event since 2012, he laid down a stunning long program at Skate Canada in Mississauga, Ont., to reach the podium. Because he'd tumbled well down the world rankings in his time off, Skate Canada was his only Grand Prix event this season.

Reynolds, who said next season will be his last, is thankful for this second chance. He's looking at it like he's got nothing to lose. "I'm just thankful I do have this opportunity after so much struggle, after so much pain, and it's really given me lots to celebrate, even getting to this point. The senior events at the Canadian championships begin Friday at Ottawa's TD Place. THE CANADIAN PRESS

ATHLETICS

Analytics for athletes imminent

The Canadian Olympic Committee is teaming with a big data company to ramp up analytics for athletes.

The COC has announced an eight-year, cash-and-services sponsorship deal with SAS, an analytics software company whose clients include banks, hotels, universities and casinos.

The company's sports division has worked with the Los Angeles Kings, Orlando Magic and New York Mets as well as Major League Soccer. The pro teams often want data on season-ticket holder retention and fan experience enhancement. Athlete performance will be SAS's primary work for the COC.

"Our initial focus will be on player analytics," SAS president Cameron Dow said. "It's a lot more than a marketing partnership. It was more around how could we actually work with the Canadian Olympic Committee and the Olympic team to actually make a difference and drive results." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Satisfying Egg Drop Soup

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

Hang up the phone! Forget bringing dinner in because this version of a traditional takeout soup has more heft thanks to the addition of asparagus. Plus it has cheese. Nothing trumps cheese.

Ready in 20 minutes

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 10 minutes
Serves 4

Ingredients

- 4 cups (950 ml) low sodium chicken broth
- 1/2 cup (120 ml) chopped asparagus
- 2 Tbsp (30 ml) unsalted butter
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) chopped onion
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) fresh

grated Parmesan cheese, extra for garnish
• sea salt and pepper to taste

Directions

1. In a large pot, place butter, asparagus and onion. Saute until vegetables are soft but crisp. Add broth and bring to a simmer, allow to simmer for 5 minutes.

2. Meanwhile, beat eggs and add Parmesan cheese. Then drizzle eggs into broth. Lightly stir until eggs are cooked. Lower heat and allow to cook another 5 minutes.

3. Ladle into bowls, sprinkle top with Parmesan and serve.

* IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
For the next four weeks, you will be more popular. You might join a club, group or organization. Enjoy being friendly!

Taurus April 21 - May 21
People in authority will admire you during the next four weeks. Because of this, you have an advantage. Go after what you want!

Gemini May 22 - June 21
If you can travel in the next four weeks, do so. Do anything that will expand your horizons, because you want adventure and a chance to learn something new.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
During the next four weeks, your focus will be on shared property, shared responsibilities and issues related to inheritances, insurance matters, taxes and debt.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Partnerships and close relationships will be a strong focus for you during the next four weeks. You will find that you can reflect upon your style of relating with others and learn something from it.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You will be eager to be productive and effective in everything you do during the next four weeks. That's why you will want to do an excellent job!

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Fun vacations are tops on your menu throughout the next four weeks. If you can't get away on a vacation, then enjoy the arts, social outings, parties, sports events and playful times with kids.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
During the next four weeks, your focus will turn to home, family and domestic issues.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
The pace of your days will accelerate during the next four weeks, because you will be busy taking short trips, running errands, talking to people and reading, writing and studying more. Busy you!

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Your mind will be on money, finances and cash flow more than usual during the next four weeks. Trust your moneymaking ideas!

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Because the Sun in your sign for the next four weeks, you have a chance to replenish yourself for the coming year. It also will attract favourable situations and important people to you.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
Work alone or behind the scenes throughout the next four weeks, because this will serve your best interests. It's a good time to make goals for the year ahead.
